I believe that Jesus Christ is the Incarnate son of Mary and that he is free of original sin unlike his mother

I believe that the son has one nature a human entirety which is 100% human And a Divine entirety which is 100% divine that the human entirety and divine entirety are not divided or confused or mixed but United in perfect unison

I Believe that The Entireties are like a candle made of oil And a candle made of wax burning As One Flame

I Believe that A entirety is not a nature And is not a part or component and that it is 100% of And the whole of something

Believe that the Eucharist can only be consecrated by a priest or higher clergy member with valid Apostolic succession and that the Eucharist should always be taken in both kinds never just one

I believe that double predestination the belief that one's fate is predestined from birth contradicts the Free Will given to us by God

I believe somethings can be predestined Such as genetics And what you look like but not your eternity And that the heresies of John Calvin should be rejected

I believe that you're biological sex Is predestined and any attempt to change it Put you into Rebellion with God's sovereignty

I believe that birth defects are predestined but if they are fixed that it does not put you in Rebellion with God's Sovereignty And that Fixing a person's birth defects if they are life-threatening Does not misalign you with God's will in any shape or form

I believe that sprinkling even in times of emergency does not count as a baptism And that it is a christening
I believe that rebaptism is heretical there is only one baptism And that the only reason one should be rebaptized is if they were never baptized properly in the first place Groups that do not have valid baptisms Include the LDS Church The Jehovah's Witnesses And other trinitarian heresies as well as those who only view baptism as symbolic Only those who believe that baptism Is necessary for salvation and that it truly does change you have valid baptisms

I Believe The church is the universal Body of Christ Founded by Jesus Christ himself

I believe that There is only one true Universal Church And it has been split into many but not broken for Christ has said the Gates of Hell will never Prevail against his church

I Believe this church upholds the values of Apostolic tradition And that it upholds the authority of scripture We look forward to the end of days or the churches will unite again let the will of the father be done in Jesus name amen
